expressed happiness at the progress and forward movement. Both sides felt that the process of improvement of relations should continue while differences are gradually resolved. The development of economic and trade linkages with Chine contribute meaningfully to this process. It was agreed to hasten finalisation of agreements on direct shipping and banking links. An Agreement on Avoidance of Double Taxation was signed during the visit. It is expected to facilitate investment and technology flows between the two countries.

During discussions the two sides stressed the importance of implementation of the Border Peace and Tranquillity Agreement and agreed to work towards turning India-China border areas into areas of friendship and to open further points for border trade between the two countries. The Chinese Vice Premier and Foreign Minister reiterated that the Kashmir question should be resolved through a patient dialogue between India and Pakistan.

The visit provided a useful opportunity for a detailed exchange of views where both sides have expressed their determination to continue positive developments in India-China relations so as to establish a mature, stable and long term relationship between the two countries.
